making all the structures and materials the body needs to function.

DNA is organized as two complementary strands, head-to-toe, with bonds between them that can be "unzipped" like a zipper, separating the strands.

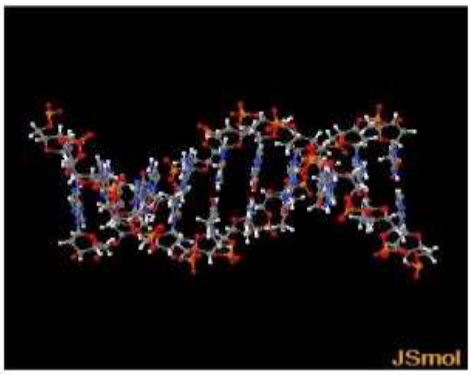
The sugar-phosp hate backbones spiral around the outer surface of DNA.

Between these backbones are two different sized grooves, designated the major and minor grooves. The major groove is approximately 50% wider than the minor.



DNA Structure

Major grooves in a helix refer to the larger of the unequal grooves that are formed as a result of the double-helical structure of DNA.

Minor grooves in a helix refer to the smaller of the unequal grooves that are formed as a result of the double-helical structure of DNA.

Try this to see the two grooves!!
