In JULY 26,2017 the Department of Zoology conducted a seminar on the topic “Solid Waste Management” by Mr. Babu Parambath, a green activist and project co-ordinator of ‘Niravu’, a residential forum at Vengeri, Calicut. He presented Nirav -the residence association, which means fullness, is today a proven example of the successful efforts of a community to regain a bygone lifestyle. It is a collective engaged in organic cultivation and related nature-friendly activities. Apart from the successful organic farming and zero waste system, Niravu ventured into water conservation by maintaining water resources and harvesting rainwater. It also started energy conservation by encouraging the use of solar panels, biogas, LED bulbs, etc. He also said that the primary aim of cultivation is never only harvesting. It is an attempt to make our lifecycle complete, and that is what the Niravu initiative is trying to communicate to society.”
